April 2018 Update

Breaking free of the good, liberal poem

“We should seek to shock, to embarrass, to prod the reader ... There is beauty in a swear word used well, or a satirical attitude that is nuanced but defiantly hostile. There is beauty in a vile character so long as complex dramatization takes place”.

Our poetry judge Daljit Nagra explores how a range of voices in your work can make poetry “ alive to the needs of a broader set of moods and aesthetics”.
